

Instructor: Date:

Learner: Regional Branch:

Program: Center:

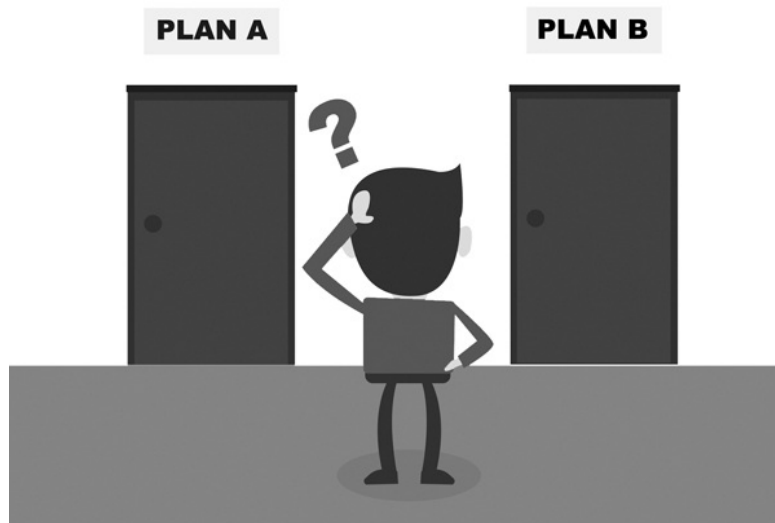

CONTENT

- Let's Start! • Let's Explore! • Let's Practice! • Extension Activity • Target Words • Learning Points

Let's Start!

Pronunciation Spot: The right homonyms can help you write!

Learning Outcome

Describe hypothetical situations in written and spoken interactions according to work and social contexts.

Ask your partner:

- What is a homonym? Do you know any?
- Can you give an example of a homonym in a sentence and explain its meaning?

Can Do Statements

- I can talk about emotions, opinions, and behavior in work situations.
- I can say and use words like phased and fazed.
- I can use proper intonation in short questions and statements.

Let's Explore!

In the long run if you save your money, you will be alright.

* In the "long run" means to extend over a long period of time.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

John: Have you talked to any of the others?

Lisa: Not yet.

John: I talked to Marybeth.

Lisa: How's Marybeth?

John: She is frustrated. How are you doing?

Lisa: It is abhorrent how our former company treated us by keeping on scab workers and phasing out the older workers. It isn't right, is it? Their management style is completely aberrant. The thing that frustrates me the most, is that their economic policy is not economical. In the long run they lose money because they have inexperienced staff which will cost them customers.

It is so ridiculous, isn't it? Every cell in my body is furious.

John: It's tough. Don't be fazed by this. You don't have to sell your car just yet. You are looking for other work now, aren't you? Or are you going to lie low for awhile?

Lisa: No, but first I'm going to complain to our union about a former company. Have you spoken to them?

John: No, I haven't.

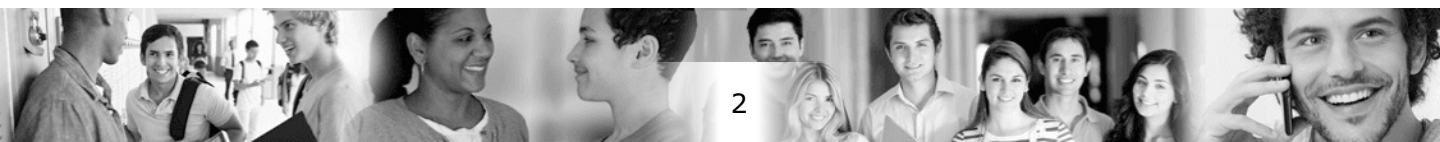

Lisa: They can't do that to people. I'm not going to lie about what happened there. Afterwards, if I don't have my job back, I will start looking for something. I might start my own business. You have talked to some companies, haven't you?

John: No, not yet. You're more ambitious than I am. Your connections at Turbo Store might come in handy though.

Lisa: Yeah they might. I'm just still so angry. You're angry, aren't you?

John: To be honest, I'm okay. I want to move on to something else. I think I have some ideas and I just need to focus and find my interest. There are going to be interesting times ahead, aren't there?

Lisa: Yes, there are.

Let's Practice!

Lisa continues to rant* about her former employers.

*"To rant" means to express your feelings about something in an angry fashion.

Instructions: Organize the mystery sentences.

1. completely / aberrant / is / style / Their / . / management

2. is / it / ? / , / so / ridiculous / isn't / It

3. but / be / fazed / don't / by / tough / . / It's / , / this

4. still / . / so / angry / I'm / just

Let's Practice!

Check Lisa's intonation.

Instructions: Select the correct answer. Read the sentences aloud. Check your pronunciation with your instructor.

1. Which sentences contain rising intonation?
 - a. Have you talked to any of the others?
 - b. You are looking for other work now, aren't you?
 - c. Have you spoken to them?
 - d. You have talked to some companies, haven't you?
 - e. You're angry, aren't you?
 - f. How are you doing?
 - g. There are going to be interesting times ahead, aren't there?

Extension Activity

What homonyms do you hear, here?

Instructions: Complete the following steps. Fill in the Self-Assessment.

- In pairs, research 5 homonyms.
- Understand the meaning and be able to give an example.
- After, separate and make groups of three or four.
- Each person makes a brief presentation of their pair's homonyms.
- The other group members write them down.
- Reunite the original pairs and compare the different homonyms you have learned.
- Finally, select 5 homonyms that you like the best and write a short paragraph.

Self-Assessment

Yes

No

I research homonyms.

☐ ☐

I explain homonyms and give examples.

☐ ☐

I write a short paragraph using homonyms.

☐ ☐

Target Words

- long run (noun): after a long time
e.g. In the long run they lose money because they have inexperienced staff which will cost them customers.
- abhorrent (adjective): detestable
e.g. It is abhorrent how our former company treated us by keeping on scab workers and phasing out the older workers.
- aberrant (adjective): abnormal
e.g. Their management style is completely aberrant.
- to phase out (verb): to stop using something or someone gradually or in stages
e.g. It is abhorrent how our former company treated us by keeping on scab workers and phasing out the older workers.
- fazed (adjective): to be disturbed e.g. Don't be fazed by this.
- to lay low (verb): to keep oneself or one's plans hidden e.g. Are you going to lie low for awhile?

Learning Points

Using Homonyms and Homophones

Homonyms are made up of homophones and homographs.

Homophones are words that sound the same but have different meanings. They may be spelled the same or differently.

For example:

right and write

right (noun) and right (adjective)

Homographs are words are spelled the same, but are pronounced differently. They also have different meanings.

For example:

present (noun) and present (verb)

wind (noun) and wind (verb)

Examples:

- their ... there
- your ... you're
- phased ... fazed
- sell ... cell
- pair ... pear
- present ... present

Learning Points

Intonation of Short Questions, Statements and Question Tags

Intonation is the rise and fall of your voice when you speak. You use intonation to convey meaning. It is the speaker's choice.

In short statements, you use falling intonation to signal that you are finished what you are saying.

No, they aren't.

In short questions, the intonation patterns are:

Yes/No Question = Rising Intonation

Have you talked to any of the others?

WH/Information Question = Falling Intonation

How are you doing?

In Tag Questions (short questions at the end of statements) = Rising or Falling Intonation. You use falling intonation (your voice goes down) to signal that you believe what you said is correct.

You use rising intonation (your voice goes up) when you are checking, because you are not sure if you are correct.

These two sentences are the same, but they have slightly different meanings as they are said differently, depending on the speaker's intention.

Examples:

It isn't right, is it?

It is so ridiculous, isn't it?

Examples:

- You are looking for other work now, aren't you?
- Have you spoken to them?
- You have talked to some companies, haven't you?
- You're angry, aren't you?
- There are going to be interesting times ahead, aren't there?

