Let's Start!

Planning for your business future.

Learning Outcome

Describe hypothetical situations in written and spoken interactions according to work and social contexts.

Ask your partner:

- Do you think you have a good head for business? Why?
- What kind of business would you like to start?

Can Do Statements

- I can talk about emotions, opinions and behavior in a work situation.
- I can talk about what I will be doing or what I will have done.
- I can talk about hypothetical situations in the past.

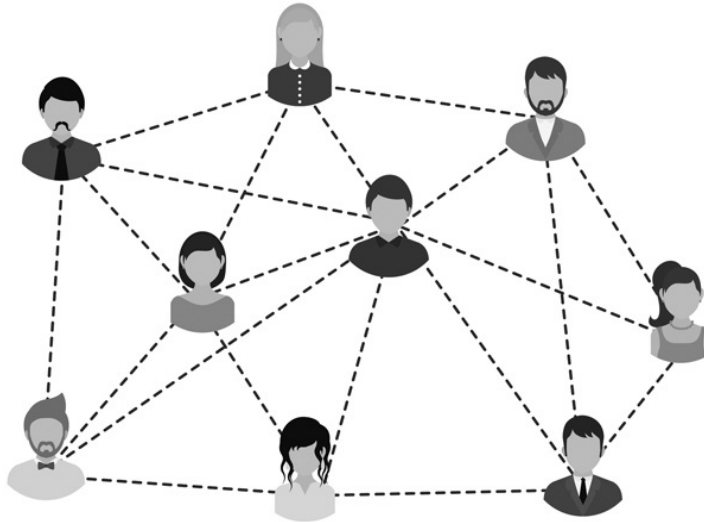

Let's Explore!

Mark has some really smart colleagues at his office.

* A "colleague" is a person you work with.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

- Jill: So I was wondering what are your feelings about Corbin? Do you like working there?
- Black suit: You are not a spy, are you? Listen, if I had picked another place to work, I would not be anywhere near as fulfilled as I am at Corbin. It really is a good place to work. Your colleagues are top-notch, the work is challenging and the job pays well.
- Jill: Any downside?
- Black suit: You are snowed under with paperwork. If I had stayed at my last job I would have worked much less than I do now. Of course, I would have also been paid much less than I am now as well. Maybe in five years time I'll have had enough of this job and I will have made enough money to start my own firm. That said, I am very satisfied here. Although, if they left the old manager in charge of the office, I would have left. He was terrible. Our new boss is really on the ball.
- Black suit: Just a sec ... Hello? Hi. Yep. No don't phone Linda now, she'll be writing. Uh huh. Yeah check in with accounting. They'll be doing something wrong. Uh huh. Do I think we will be finished by tonight? Yes, I think we will have it finished by 5:00 p.m. Bye.
- Black suit: Sorry. I have to go. What's your name?
- Jill: Jill.
- Black suit: Roger. Good luck!

Let's Practice!

Brian discusses why he likes working at Corbin.

Learning Points

The Future Continuous Tense vs. The Future Perfect Tense

You use the Future Continuous tense to express actions that occur over a period of time in the future.

For example:

I will be working at 4 p.m. tomorrow.

The person will start work at some point in the future and still be working at 4 p.m. It is not clear when the person will stop working.

The structure of the Future Continuous is:

Subject + will + be + verb -ing

They'll be doing something wrong.

*It is common to use contractions in conversation (They will = They'll).

You use the Future Perfect tense to express future actions that take place before a different action in the future. The Future Perfect is somewhat like the Present Perfect tense, but the perspective is the future, not the present.

For example:

We can have lunch at 12 p.m. tomorrow. I will have finished the meeting.

The bus will leave the terminus at 10 a.m. You will arrive at 11:15 a.m. At that time, the bus will have left.

The structure of the Future Perfect tense is:

Subject + will + (not) have + past participle

I will have made enough money to start my own firm.

*Notice the position of not. It comes between will and have.

Examples:

- No don't phone Linda now, she'll be writing.
- They'll be doing something wrong.
- Do I think we will be finished by tonight? Yes, I think we will have it finished by 5:00 p.m.
- Maybe in five years time I'll have had enough of this job.
- I will have made enough money to start my own firm.

Learning Points

The Third Conditional

There are four types of conditional sentences in English:

1. Zero Conditional - to talk about certainty and facts
2. First Conditional - to talk about real possibilities in the present or the future
3. Second Conditional - to talk about unreal possibilities in the present or the future
4. Third Conditional - to talk about unreal past situations

You use the third conditional to talk about unreal situations in the past.

These are things that did not happen in the past. You often use the third conditional to talk about regrets.

Look at the chart below for the structure of the third conditional:

Conditional Name	Structure	Example
Third	If + Past Perfect, could/would have + past participle	If I had stayed at my last job I would have worked much less than I do now.

Examples:

- If I had picked another place to work, I would not be anywhere near as fulfilled as I am at Corbin.
- If I had stayed at my last job I would have worked much less than I do now. Of course, I would have also been paid much less than I am now as well.
- If they would have left the old manager in charge of the office, I would have left.
